Communication parent - teacher

- a lot of communication can be arranged by the child with the teacher.
- where necessary, the teacher will visit you via the Parro app, email, telephone or outside after school.
- you can always send a verbal or written message through your child
- do you want to share information or have a conversation? Send an email to the teacher; keep in mind that teachers have working hours, which means emailing on the working days of the relevant teacher and not after 4:30 PM.
The primary process is number one, which means that the teacher can never email during class time. And that he/she is often busy after school with learning activities, consultation moments and lesson preparations. Then mail cannot be answered, so this can take some time.
- for urgent matters you can of course call.
- before class time, the teacher is focused on the reception of the group and the start of the teaching time. At that time you cannot talk to the teacher. However, IB staff and management always walk outside or at the front door at the start of the day, you can always contact them.
